

Sam Miller, the wife murderer of Memphis, has been convicted and sentenced to hang. The execution will occur in March.

There is a resemblance between the pictures of Pierpont Morgan and Dr. Crum, and they are both posing before the American people with about equal notoriety and favor. Their fellow-feeling is an unknown quantity.

The bill pending action of Congress authorizing the retirement of Capt. R. P. Hobson has failed by reason of two examining boards failing to find him physically disqualified for active service. He has been assigned to duty in charge of the construction department at the Puget Sound Naval Station at Bremerton.

The January distribution of the common school fund was made from the State treasury this week, when $833,333.00, which is two-thirds of the annual appropriation for schools in the State, was disbursed. Of this the counties get $735,023.80, and the separate districts the remainder. The other one-third will be distributed in June.

Brooks Story, who escaped from the penitentiary about sixteen months ago, voluntarily gave himself up to the sheriff of Attala county at Kosciusko last Saturday and was conveyed to the Rankin State farm to complete his sentence. Story was a train robber by profession and had escaped from the Mississippi penitentiary four times. He became tired of eluding the officers and decided to win his freedom by serving out his sentence.

You may rest assured that candidates in the campaign now beginning are not to be "pulled" by men who are not voters when the primary election arrives. Every candidate will be prepared with a "black list" bearing the name of each delinquent poll tax payer after the first of February, and small indeed will be the favors that such delinquents will receive at the hands of the aforesaid candidates. If you expect to be "in the market" a poll tax receipt will be a good argument.

The Aberdeen Weekly suggests that there is a "candidates' trust" in Mississippi, which will combine to get their announcements in the press of the State at a dollar each. The Sentinel is not inclined to take much stock in this report. However, as we have before stated, the paper that sells its announcement space for any such measly sum is probably getting all that the service is worth, as papers of that class have very little standing or influence. The Weekly also points out what this paper has before held, that it is an injustice to county candidates to exact a fee of $10 for their announcements, and accept those of State candidates for a less sum. State candidates who desire to use The Sentinel's announcement columns will pay the same fee we get from county candidates.—Yazoo City Sentinel.

The suggestion of The Weekly was intended to convey the idea that State candidates had entered into a compact to ignore the local newspapers entirely, depending upon the patriotism of the press and the cleverness of the "penny-a-liners" and bureau correspondents of outside metropolitan journals to sound their thunder. Failing in these resources a combination or pool, representing a dollar each, could be formed with prospect of solving the problem. There is quite a number of avowed candidates in the field for State offices and upon what other hypothesis can the absence of a single announcement be explained, and what else can it be called but a "candidates' trust?"

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup is usually well known to mothers of croupy children. Mass meetings have been called in a number of the counties of the State to select delegates to the Prohibition State Convention, which is to meet at Jackson, February 17th. The prohibition leaders are active to arouse sufficient interest in the movement to make it an issue in the State campaign. Of course, the candidates for Governor will promise not to veto a prohibition measure should it pass the assembly and thus sidetrack the issue to be fought over among candidates for the legislature only. This will reduce the agitation to the minimum and dispose it to that field in politics where it belongs.

Mrs. Felton, a well-known newspaper writer of Atlanta, suggests that if the women would put old-fashioned pockets in their dresses they would not have so many cases of purse snatching to report to the police. That's a fact, as any man who ever tried to find one of those pockets will testify.—Jackson Clarion-Ledger.

We are hopeful the report that the candidates for State offices have agreed to form a trust and regulate the price for announcing in the papers is based upon rumor simply. This would be a dangerous step for any candidate for office to take. The newspapers of Mississippi are sensitive to their position, and to a unit would fight to the death a combination of the character named. Aside from the danger of it to the candidates, it would be wrong in principle. The day has passed in Mississippi when the candidate controls the newspaper; the sense of justice and business judgment that has for years been dormant in the Mississippi owners of newspaper properties are asserting themselves and the papers have come courageously out from their old disposition to allow themselves to be imposed on. Although we are a candidate for a State office we are first and last a newspaper man and any proposition made to combine to depress the business of the legitimate newspapers of the State would not only be declined, but the whole affair would be promptly exposed. Thus far only the most honorable men in Mississippi have entered the campaign for offices of great honor and trust, and we think it altogether unlikely that as many as one of them has contemplated the step mentioned.—Meridian Star.

The Measure You Met.

This brief extract from a not very popular book is going the rounds of the press:

"If I trust, I am trusted; if I suspect, I am suspected; if I love, I am loved; if I hate, I am despised."

Keep these words in mind and repeat them three or four times a day and you are told that during the year there will be a radical change for the better in temper of mind, attitude of life, and tone of character.

It is a curious and interesting fact, known to those who dwell anywhere above the most sordid condition of thought, we are told, that the world is a mere reflection of one's self, and gives back, trait for trait, every characteristic of the man. A man finds what he looks for, receives what he expects, and, in brief, "gets what is coming to him."

This is a beautiful theory, but, like most beautiful theories, it fades in the wash. Fast colors are usually dull colors, not brilliant. If character, gentleness, honor and faith were meted to every man just as he measured it to others, there would be no necessity for jails, nor even for almshouses. The world will inevitably give you kick for kick unless it be afraid of you, but if it be afraid, you may kick it viciously and continuously without return. In this cruel old world it is frequently advisable to have two schools of ethics, one to teach and one to practice. Venezuela is being hammered at present, not because it deserves the hammering any more than other nations, but because it cannot hammer back. The anvil strikes the hammer as hard as the hammer strikes the anvil, but the anvil generally outlasts its antagonist.

It is advisable to remember even when committing the extract quoted to memory, that it was Christ who was crucified, not Barabas. Merit and goodness do not always win by any manner of means, and those who pin faith to the theory that they do will learn their error to their cost before they are much older. The scaffold and the stake have demanded the noblest of earth, and they are still unfed.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Stripping the matter of diplomatic verbiage, somebody has lied in the Indiana affair, and it is up to the president and Postmaster General Payne to explain. The message that was sent by the bondsmen of Minnie Cox is quite different from the message the president says he received from those gentlemen. While the art of lying has always been regarded as paragon of political success, the president and his chief post-office adviser have really converted an artistic and beloved tradition into a rather raw situation.—Meridian Star.

It is probable that a textile school will be established in Arkansas, as a branch of the University of the State. A bill has been introduced into the national house of representatives donating to the State of Arkansas 100,000 acres of public lands for the purpose of establishing, equipping and maintaining the proposed school. We understand that the people of Arkansas are anxious to see the school established.—New Orleans Picayune.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It immediately relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he recommended it to many others. The man who intends to enter the State canvass in pursuit of a State office, if he is not well known, had just as well lay aside three thousand dollars, for he will need every bit of it in his business. The State canvass is going to be a very expensive affair indeed.—Jackson News.
